

Florida State University Honors Legal Scholars Program

The Honors Legal Scholars Program, a collaboration of the Florida State University Honors Program and Florida State University College of Law, introduces undergraduate students to law school and gives them insight to legal education.

Why apply?

Honors Legal Scholars become members of the law school community as early as their freshman year of college and enjoy the benefits of that relationship throughout their undergraduate years. Honors Legal Scholars have unique advantages as they begin their studies. They have opportunities to learn about law school and the legal profession, meet professors and admissions professionals, observe law classes and shadow current law students. They also receive special invitations to attend law school events and lectures.

Am I eligible?

Applicants to the Honors Legal Scholars Program must first be accepted into the Florida State University Honors Program. Students admitted to the Honors Program will receive access to the Honors Legal Scholars Program Application. The application for the Honors Legal Scholars Program includes a resume, personal statement and current transcript(s). Applicants are selected on a competitive basis and will be notified by June 1st each year. The application for Honors Legal Scholars becomes available mid-February and must be submitted by March 15th.

There are many competitive applicants to the Honors Legal Scholars Program each year with limited available openings. We highly encourage anyone not admitted to the program to reapply in subsequent years. All majors are eligible to apply.
