

JOIN OUR SELECT GROUP OF

Honors Medical Scholars

AND GET A HEAD START ON YOUR MEDICAL EDUCATION

Through this highly competitive program, the Florida State University College of Medicine recruits a handful of Florida's top high school students. We seek young people who can demonstrate:

- A high level of academic ability.
- An interest in a medical career.
- A heart for serving vulnerable populations.

Our goal is to develop resilient and adaptable scholars who reflect the values and mission of the College of Medicine: "patient-centered health care ... responsive to community needs ... service to elder, rural, minority and underserved populations."

Becoming an Honors Medical Scholar isn't easy. You'll need to get accepted by:

1. Florida State, as a freshman for the following fall. (Application deadline 10/19/16)
2. The FSU Honors Program. (Notification will be sent early February 2017)
3. Then the College of Medicine Honors Medical Scholars Program. (Application postmark deadline 2/17/17)

Once you make it in, you'll have a rare opportunity to build early relationships in the College of Medicine. As an undergrad, you'll take a front-row seat for the Honors Medical Scholars Seminar and have medical faculty members as your mentors. You'll take premed prerequisite courses and be involved in premed organizations and community volunteer activities. When you complete the premed requirements, you'll be eligible to apply to the College of Medicine through the early-decision process.

This flier is just an introduction. If you think you're Honors Medical Scholars material, study the detailed information at www.honors.fsu.edu (university) and med.fsu.edu/honors (medical school).

Questions? Call 850-645-2826 or email honors@fsu.edu

med.fsu.edu/honors